If a glass stopper wont move, hold the neck of the bottle to a flame, or warm it by taking two turns of a string and see-sawing it. The heat engendered expands the neck of the bottle before a corresponding expansion reaches the stopper.

Before laying the carpet, if moths are suspected it. is well to rub the boards over with turpentine; sprinkling with very dilute earbolic seid, about a teaspoonful to a gallon of water, is also a good precaution. This last should be rubbed over the walls before the paper is put on.

Herbs intended for drying should be picked just before the plant blossoms. Wash them until they are entirely free from dust, and place them on a sieve to Then put them in the oven and let them re, main until they are perfectly dry. Afterward rub from the stalks, put in giass jars and cover closely. There is good reason to believe that contagious diseases are often communicated by dogs, ents, and other household pets. A case of scarlet fever recenty occurred in England in which a dog conveyed the disease. He had been the constant companion of a fever nationt, and his bair doubtless became impregnated with the malaria.

Curry has been discovered to be bad for the com plexion. Dr. Henderson, writting to an Indian paper, says that all carries are colored with turmeric, and that if habitually eaten they will in course of years affect the fleshy tissue, and ultimately the skin. The jaundice hue of many Anglo-Indians is not due to sun-barning or any affection of the liver, but results solely from the constant consumption of curries containing turmerie.

Mothers cannot watch their children too closely during the summer and autumn, to prevent them eating unripe fruit. The process of digestion is very rapid with children and they almost incessantly crave for food, especially fruits and sweets. Even ripe fruit must not be indulged in too freely. Many people are of the opinion that if children like a thing it must be good for them. This is a great mistake. Give polson to children and they will eat or drink it ust as well as if it were a good article of food. Anicals are guided by their instinct and their wonderfully developed organs of smell in the selection of their food. Human beings do not possess such an instinct or such powerful organs for smelling. Those who have the care of children must teach them how and what to eat. The following recipe will restore the original polish to furniture, especially in the case of such articles as Office pianes, fancy tables, cabinets, lacquered ware, etc., which have become tarnished by use: Make a polish by putting half an ounce of shellse, the same quantity of gum lac and a quarter of an ounce of gum sandarac into a pint of spirits of wine. Put them all together in a stone bottle near the fire, shaking it very often. As soon as the gums are dissolved it is ready broadcloth will do nicely -put a little of the polish on it, also a few drops of linseed oil. Rub the surface to be polishee with this, going round and round over a small space at a time, until it begins to be quite smooth. Then finish by a second rubbing with spirits of wine and more of the polish. Furniture thus treated will have a brilliant lustre equal to new.

The art of arranging bouquets is very simple. It is only necessary to possess a good eye for color and have some idea of tasteful combination. At present the most elegant bouquets are those in the flower of the senson are skillfully arranged according to their hues, fragrance being usually made subservient to color. Having collected the flowers to be used on a tray, all the superfluous leaves should be picked from the stems and, by placing the flowers side by side, you can easily see the order in which they will be most advantageously displayed. A very pretty hand SHIPPING & COMMISSION MERCHANTS, bouquet can be made by taking a small straight stick. not over a quarter of an inch in diameter ; tie a string to the top of it, and begin with a few delicate flowers, or one handsome one for a centre piece, winding the string about each stem as you add the flowers and leaves to the bonquet. Always place the flowers with the shortest stems at the top, reserving all those with long stems for the base, and finish upthe bouquet with a fringe of finely-cut foliage. Then cut all stems evenly, wrap damp cotton about them and cover the stems with paper cut in pretty lace designs. In making bouquets from garden flowers, such as are most easy to procure, the flowers can be arranged fiatly and a background made from sprays of evergreen.

Testhing children who are beginning to eat solid food can be supplied with nothing better than bis- Importers and Commission Agents and Wholesale cuits made from granulated wheat. The child will not attempt to swallow this food until it is softened by mastication, and the mechanical action of the biscuit upon the gums will greatly assist the teeth toward making their appearance. The act of eating this food will necessarily occupy much time, and this will give the teeth and jaws considerable valuable exercise. The food thus swallowed proves very nutritious, and rapidly builds up small boys and girls, as Stationer, News Dealer and Bookwell as larger ones. It often happens that black called and other printed goods which have a white pattern on a black ground will not hear washing, unless some precautions are taken to prevent "running," or in other words, the white spots acquire a reddish color and the black ground becomes dull and foxy. This can be avoided by the following method : Dissolve two onnces of red eromate of potash, three ounces of common salt, and two and a half ounces of sal soda, in a wash-boiler full of water heated to a boiling point. Put the dress into this but bath for five minutes, and frequently turn and stir it. Then wash it thoroughly in clean water. There will be no further danger of discolorstion, and the white portions of the goods will appear perfectly bright and clear.

Rice is inferior in nutritious qualities to wheater flour, and should by no means be depended on as a main constituent of the dietary for infants, but may supply an agreeable change, especially when the bowels are in a relaxed condition. It has been a favorite food for children over since its first introduction, and is recommended by many of the earliest English writers on the management of infants and children. Every purse has ber own formula for the preparation of rice foods. The following is a very good one : take two tablespoonsful of the best rice and soak for an hour in cold water. Pour away this mater and macerate and gently simmer the rice in a quart of water for two or three hours. Strain through a fine sleve, and add warm milk, with a little loaf
